

Platon Youth Forum 2016 / Workshops
July, 24th – 30th, 2016

Natascha Diekmann & Sarah Jäger	You make your own luck !?	According to a recent study by Oxfam, the 62 richest people in the world own as much as the poorer half of the global population. How much inequality is fair? How does it arise? Which social, economic and political aspects characterize it? And what are the consequences for the winners or the losers?
Sven Dietl & Emil Nefzger	Development policy and international cooperation – partnership, duty of the rich or a new form of colonialism?	Development cooperation is not only about building wells, the concept has changed a lot in the last decades, yet, there are not only positive opinions about it. But what belongs to this concept? Is development work in South Sudan different than in Brazil? What are the responsibilities of western industrialized nations, who benefits the most – and who or what is actually being „developed“? Along these questions, development policy and development cooperation will be looked at from different points of view.
Natalie Dannik & Kai Dietl	Hatred of foreigners and integration	How important are solidarity and responsibility towards foreigners, immigrants, refugees and asylum seekers? We will analyze the current situations for these people in the member states of European Union. How effective are programs like Triton or Mare nostrum? Which alternatives regarding criteria of asylum can be found? What can be done to improve the situation for the refugees from Near East countries?
Katharina Bergunde	Eurotopia 2016	'Dont ask what your country can do for you - ask what you can do for your country' - but how much do you want your country to do for you? The question freedom vs. rights vs. protection in an ideal state will be our dilemma. Therefore, we will take a look at which state models exist and what we like about them to form our own ideal model state. We will define the positions citizens can have in our state and randomly distribute them among all participants in a rotation to find out what we expect our state to do for us or let us do on our own.
